

Tallaght Partnership

Tallaght Partnership is a local development company set up in 1991 to tackle poverty and social exclusion in Tallaght, West-Dublin. The Partnership works together with people who live in Tallaght, community groups and statutory agencies to address issues such as early school leaving, unemployment, active citizenship, families with difficulties, and community childcare.

The key approach of the Partnership is to identify new ways to deal with issues, get all relevant parties around the table and develop a pilot project to try and test it. The objective is to mainstream successful projects and make them the responsibility of the appropriate public service provider. The Partnership's role is one of linking, coordinating and providing a neutral space for organisations to work together.
